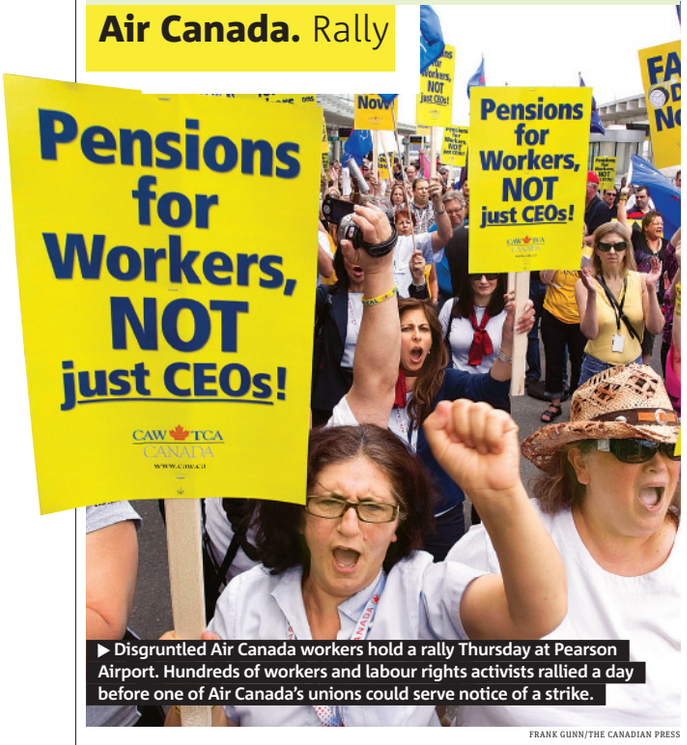
Air Canada. Rally



▶ Disgruntled Air Canada workers hold a rally Thursday at Pearson Airport. Hundreds of workers and labour rights activists rallied a day before one of Air Canada's unions could serve notice of a strike.

Workers threaten walkout

Air Canada customer service and sales staff are threatening to walk off the job Monday night if the airline doesn't budge on key concessions. A proposal to change pension plans for new hires is a key issue as Air Canada and the Canadian Auto Workers union continue bargaining in Toronto. If bargaining fails, the airline said it plans to maintain full operations by implementing a contingency service to minimize the impact on customers.

Putting a price on Afghan lives

There's no limit on 'ex-gratia' payments made to civilians caught in crossfire: Lawyer ◐ 2,000 Canadian troops remain in Afghanistan

The Canadian government has given out more than $1 million in goodwill payments to compensate hundreds of Afghans for deaths and damages incurred over the course of Canada's mission in Afghanistan.

The sobering tally comes as Canadian troops prepare to leave Kandahar next month.

While most would argue that the loss of human life can't be measured in dollars and cents, the military has a long-standing policy of making one-time, no-strings-attached "ex-gratia" payments to those who suffer losses because of the actions of Canadian troops.

The government has paid $1,047,946 to 453 people since 2005, according to figures provided by the Defence Department.

The names of the recipients, as well as the circumstances that led to the compensation awards, are not disclosed in the public accounts documents or by the department.

"It is not our policy to discuss in detail compensation to families," spokesman Andrew McKelvey wrote in an email. "Payments are a private matter between all parties, and disclosure of recipients could put these individuals at risk of extortion or otherwise jeopardize their safety."

The Canadian military accepts documents signed by local elders as proof in claims, but there must be evidence that Canadian troops were responsible. Canada also compensates for harm done during joint operations with the Afghan National Army when it is unclear which force is responsible.

All payments are made in Afghanis, the local currency. Sums greater than $2,000 need the approval of the deputy minister of defence.

Jonathan Chaplan, a Justice Department lawyer, oversees all ex-gratia payments. Lawyers on the ground determine how much to pay out.

"At the end of the day, you try to be fair and to determine what's reasonable in the circumstances, given that there isn't a legal obligation," Chaplan said.

Afghan President Hamid Karzai has publicly and angrily called on foreign forces to do more to ensure civilians aren't caught in the crossfire. THE CANADIAN PRESS

- The settlements ranged from less than $100 to as much as $21,420 — a fortune in a country where the national gross domestic product is about $1,000 per person.
- The UN's latest annual civilian casualty report found 2,777 Afghan civilians were killed in 2010, which was up from the year before. Of those deaths, 550 occurred in Kandahar, the epicentre of Canada's war effort.

Man gets jail for 'horrific' murder

Even when she was homeless, Bly Markis kept in touch with her father and mother.

Using the phone card they gave her, their once successful but by then drug addicted daughter would call every few days.

But Martin DeNarvaez put an end to those conversations April 28, 2007, when he savagely beat their only child, 33, known affectionately by her friends as California, in an office tower stairwell.

On Thursday, Ontario Superior Court Justice John McMahon sentenced DeNarvaez, 26, who has several prior assault convictions, to life in prison with no eligibility for parole for 14 years. In April, he pleaded guilty to second-degree murder, avoiding a first-degree murder trial.

"I'm very satisfied that he's going to jail today," Bly's father, Peter Markis, told reporters. "He put us through a lot."

Eleanor Markis, Bly's mother, said she looks forward to talking about their beautiful, compassionate daughter without referring to DeNarvaez.

"He has now been eliminated from my mind," she said.

McMahon said while two psychiatrists found DeNarvaez is mentally ill and substance addicted, he was nonetheless able to appreciate the nature of the "absolutely horrific" murder.

Mom seeks more information

Family has set up an email, busaccidentinfo@gmail.com, to hear from witnesses from the night Alex Gillespie was struck by a TTC bus

A grieving mother whose teenage son was fatally struck by a bus after police dispersed a beach party is still looking for answers about how police did their job that night.

A previous investigation that examined the service provided by police, not their conduct, found that policing was adequate.

And the family fears nothing will come of a new review of police conduct recommended by the Toronto Police Services Board.

Alex Gillespie, 17, was attending a party last Aug. 20 that was expected to draw as many as 4,000 people to the Ashbridge's Bay area.

He had been drinking for a short time but wasn't drunk, said his mother, Kathryn Wright, who appeared before the police services board Thursday.

Police Chief Bill Blair told the board 68 officers were called to control "a large and growing crowd."

About 15 minutes after police dispersed the revellers at 10 p.m., Gillespie was hit by a TTC bus while trying to cross Lake Shore Boulevard east of Coxwell Avenue.

Ford wants TCHC homes sold

Mayor Rob Ford says the Toronto Community Housing Corporation should sell as many as all of its 928 single-family houses. But he thinks the proceeds might be best used to help the city deal with its $774-million budget shortfall rather than to repair problem-plagued apartment buildings.

TCHC managing director Case Ootes, who has less than a week remaining in his term as an interim one-man board of directors, pitched the mass sale Thursday morning.

Still no answers in escort's death

Escort agency says she worked there Dec. 6-20 She told the agency she was going to B.C. to undergo treatment for cervical cancer, but would return

It's been almost three months since Kera Freeland's body was found in a ditch in Caledon, and yet there are still no answers about how she died.

In an exclusive interview with the Toronto Star, Freeland's adoptive mother spoke for the first time Thursday.

"Somebody knows something," Denise Freeland said from Calgary. "I don't believe she was likely to take her own life. She didn't get there by herself. She didn't drive and didn't even have a driver's licence."

The young woman's body was found March 17.

"I got a call from the birth mother," she said. "I was pretty much in shock."

Kera had told her mother she was working in modelling.

Denise and her husband adopted Freeland as an "endearing little girl" with a gift for art when she was seven. But she had also experienced much change and much loss after her birth mother, a struggling divorced woman with two children, gave her up for adoption. She moved from one foster home to another.

"She believed the best in people and until the day she died she never believed anyone would hurt her." DENISE FREELAND

But Denise and her husband saw so much that was positive about Kera. She loved studying and sought the approval of her teachers. And she learned a passion for travel after her parents took her to England, France and California.

However, Freeland eventually left home at 14, when she moved into a group home.

When Freeland showed an interest in recreational drugs, her family and social workers tried to intervene and were met with her hot temper. Diagnosed with ADHD early on, she displayed extremes in emotions.

The last time Denise heard from Freeland was a text message in mid-December. "Hi, Mom. I'm in Toronto. I'm doing some modelling. Love you. Merry Christmas."

OPP MUM ON INVESTIGATION

Denise Freeland doesn't know how she died, but she hopes the answers will come.

The OPP have assured her this is an active case and police are withholding some information to protect the integrity of the investigation.

The OPP's homicide detectives have said they are still awaiting test results to determine cause of death.

Her death has not officially been classified a homicide. It's possible Freeland's body was in the ditch for up to two months.

▶ The Bay says it sees room for 30 to 50 Topshop locations across Canada.

YORKDALE IN MIX

TOPSHOP SET TO CLICK WITH ONLINE BUYERS

Torontonians will be able to access Topshop and Topman online when the U.K. fast-fashion retailers embark on a full-scale launch in Canada this year.

In what's being billed as an international first, the Bay, which holds Canadian franchise rights for the retailers, will set up online websites where shoppers can buy Topshop and Topman merchandise.

Thebay.com/topshop and thebay.com/topman launch in September.

The move will coincide with the Bay's opening of the first destination location for Topshop and Topman in Canada.

Yorkdale Mall will house the first store-within-a-store location. Under its franchise rights, the Bay can also opt to open standalone shops.

Temporary pop-up locations will bookend the summer, from June 17-19 at Queen West and Soho Streets, and in Muskoka from July 30 to Aug. 1.

Toronto photographer and blogger Tommy Ton will gather a selection of favourite looks for a capsule collection that opens at the Bay's Queen Street store June 30.

Launched in 1964, Topshop has earned a significant following.

Toronto boutique Jonathan and Olivia set up a Topshop store at its Ossington Avenue location last year.

Software company i4i pulls off a $290-million US patent victory over Microsoft Corp 'The fields are open and we can plow ahead'

FRANK GUNN/THE CANADIAN PRESS

Toronto-based software company i4i Inc. sees more growth ahead now that a "cloud" has been lifted from its business with a U.S. Supreme Court decision that confirms its $290-million US patent victory over Microsoft Corp.

"It's hard to expand and grow your business when people feel it's all under a cloud," i4i chairman Loudon Owen said Thursday.

"Now we think the fields are open and we can plow ahead," Owen said in Toronto.

"So in terms of the validity of our patent, the case is closed."

Now i4i — said to stand for Infrastructures for Information Inc. — will be able to promote and sell its technology saying it has been validated by the U.S. Supreme Court, he said.

The landmark decision has implications for the patent world because it essentially upholds existing U.S. patent law, which is used for many of the world's patents.

"It's one of the most important business cases the U.S. Supreme Court has decided in decades," Owen said.

"The unanimous decision has very clearly confirmed the current state of the law and it has added a great deal of certainty to the business community."

The U.S. high court upheld a ruling that found the world's largest software maker infringed on i4i's patent in its Microsoft Word software.

Microsoft was ordered to stop selling versions containing the infringing technology and to pay compensation to i4i.

Several high-powered companies supported Microsoft, including Apple, Google and Cisco Systems.

▶ Toronto-based i4i sued Microsoft in 2007, saying it owned the technology behind a tool that gave Word 2003 and Word 2007 users an improved way to edit XML, which is computer code that tells the program how to interpret and display a document's contents.

Top pharma customers

Many of i4i's customers are pharmaceutical companies such as Bayer, Merck and Nexgen Pharma.

The company also supplied technology to the U.S. patent office for an overhaul of its website for patent submissions.

City gets double-money jolt

City departments that struggled to meet directives to slash five per cent of their annual budgets are now being ordered to double that — for a total cut equivalent to Toronto's entire parks and recreation budget.

Cutting 10 per cent would save $375.9 million and go halfway toward filling the $774-million gap in the 2012 operating budget.

But that savings goal is more than the entire fire department budget ($371 million), and equal to the $375 million it will cost to run the parks department.

Mayor Rob Ford's administration needs managers to look hard for savings, said Coun. Peter Milczyn, who is on the budget committee.

"We need to challenge them," Milczyn said. "What we're doing now is challenging the status quo."

In the past, bureaucrats have fallen short of such targets. Last year's goal of chopping five per cent was achieved by some departments, but others boosted their budgets, including police, transit, public health and the zoo.

The library board, in particular, resisted the directive to find five per cent savings for 2011 and ended up with a slight increase in its $184-million allocation.

An internal review will go on through fall. The results will be presented to the budget committee in late November and go to council for final signoff in January 2012.

Ontario set to launch new photo ID card

Residents who are 16 or older can apply for card at 20 Service Ontario centres starting July 25, and at all 300 locations next year, minister says

MARIA BABBAGE/THE CANADIAN PRESS

▶ Ontario Transportation Minister Kathleen Wynne poses Thursday in a template for a new Ontario photo identification card at the legislature in Toronto. About 1.5 million people in Ontario don't have a driver's licence.

More than one million people in Ontario who don't have a driver's licence will soon have another option for government-issued identification, but it won't allow them to cross the U.S. border.

After a three-year wait, the province unveiled a new photo ID card Thursday for people who don't have a driver's licence.

Transportation Minister Kathleen Wynne acknowledged the ID card was a long time coming. Her 55-year-old sister doesn't drive and needs some other form of government-issued ID, she said.

The driver's licence is so "engrained" in the way business is done in Canada that it's become a stand-in for photo identification, Wynne said.

"The reality is that there are many people who either choose not to, or do not have a driver's licence. So simple transactions like opening a bank account, applying for a loan, making a purchase or simply showing identification in order to be able to vote becomes complicated."
TRANSPORTATION MINISTER KATHLEEN WYNNE

The purple card, which costs $35 and is valid for five years, won't have any Braille, but it will include raised lettering and a corner cut to make it easier for the visually impaired to find it in their wallet.

The Liberals had also promised an enhanced photo ID card that could be used instead of a passport to drive to the United States, but Wynne says the project has been put on hold because it's too costly.

However, the government may decide to go ahead with an enhanced card if there's demand for it, she said. Ontario started offering enhanced driver's licences in May 2009 as an alternative to a passport for crossing the border into the U.S. and 39,331 have been issued so far.

Applicants for the photo ID card must provide original documents that prove legal name, date of birth and signature, such as a birth certificate. The government is also working with Elections Ontario to ensure the card can be used to cast a ballot.

All other provinces except Quebec have ID cards for residents who don't drive and Ontario will work with those provinces to find a way to make it transferable, she said.

THE CANADIAN PRESS

Senior welcomes new form of identification

Reuben Cipin, an 83-year-old man who is visually impaired, said he lobbied hard for the card, which seemed to take a back seat to the high-tech driver's licences.

"I was afraid that the (photo ID) card was just going to be sitting on the backburner," he said.

The province spent about $6.5 million to produce the enhanced driver's licences, he said.

"And a very small percentage of people opted for it because they had privacy concerns," Cipin said.

Ontario's privacy commissioner had voiced concerns about the security of citizenship information that's stored on chips that are embedded in the cards because the information is transmitted wirelessly.

NDP LEADER ANDREA HORWATH

Gas prices in Ontario would be regulated under an NDP government to stop gouging at the pumps, leader Andrea Horwath said Thursday.

"We can't fix everything, but we can take steps to protect households from gas-price gouging, and I think it's time that we do that," said Horwath.

If it wins the provincial election this fall, the NDP promises to set a weekly price cap on gasoline to give consumers some predictability.

Her plan, she added, doesn't mean consumers will see a difference on a daily basis, but it will remove volatility and should make gas cheaper on an annualized basis.

Grits slam plan to kill hydro charge

Ontario's governing Liberals are on the attack, warning voters the Progressive Conservatives can't afford to keep some of their campaign promises.

Liberal campaign co-chair Greg Sorbara came out swinging at a plan by Opposition Leader Tim Hudak to eliminate the debt retirement charge from hydro bills if the Tories win the Oct. 6 election.

Residential customers are charged about $6 a month to pay down the stranded debt left over from the old Ontario Hydro, but the two parties disagree on how much is outstanding. The Liberals say it is $14.8 billion, while the Tories talk about a residual stranded debt of $7.8 billion.

Sorbara calls the plan irresponsible and says the debt will continue to grow if it isn't paid off.

G8 plans shrouded in secrecy: AG

Auditors unable to find documents detailing how projects were selected
Unclear why $50 million was spent on Parry Sound-Muskoka

The wording has been softened but the auditor general's verdict remains much the same: The Harper government kept Parliament in the dark about a $50-million G8 fund that sprayed money on dubious projects in a cabinet minister's riding.

The final report on the G8 legacy infrastructure fund concludes that the government "did not clearly or transparently" identify how the money was going to be spent when it sought parliamentary approval for the funding.

Moreover, the report criticizes the unprecedented lack of documentation to explain how and why 32 infrastructure projects in Ontario's Parry Sound-Muskoka region were selected to receive the government largesse.

It concludes that public servants had no input into the selection process; that projects were approved by John Baird, then infrastructure minister, strictly on the advice of Treasury Board president Tony Clement, whose cottage country riding hosted the G8 leaders' summit.

"It is very unusual and troubling," interim auditor general John Wiersema said Thursday after tabling the report, which was prepared under his predecessor Sheila Fraser.

"There is no paper trail behind the selection of the 32 projects. I personally in my career in auditing have not encountered a situation like that where there is absolutely no paper trail behind this."

In a separate chapter of the report, the auditor general says spending on operations and security for both the G8 and subsequent G20 meetings in Ontario was presented piecemeal to Parliament instead of in a package, leaving MPs poorly informed about total costs. THE CANADIAN PRESS

No paper trail

A total of 242 projects were identified as potential recipients of funding.

- Infrastructure Canada managed the legacy fund, but not the application intake or identification of priorities for funding and, thus, could provide no documentation about how projects were reviewed or chosen.
- Tony Clement told a news conference that the 242 originally proposed projects were advanced by six mayors in his riding. He asked them to whittle down the list to their top priorities, which they did, producing the 32 that eventually received funding.
- "So there's no mystery here," Clement said.

Cutbacks leave RCMP scrambling, says report

Delays in updating vital criminal record information have increased significantly because of mismanagement and funding shortfalls for national police services, says the federal spending watchdog.

In a report Thursday, interim auditor general John Wiersema said the RCMP — which administers a slate of crucial police services — was scrambling to find enough money to keep them afloat.

Wiersema's audit focused on four areas: Forensic laboratory services; the national DNA data bank; the federal criminal intelligence service; and a computerized system of fingerprint and criminal record data.

Despite a commitment to do so, the RCMP has not taken satisfactory steps to improve police services by acting on recommendations in three previous audit reports dating from 2000, Wiersema concluded.

"The RCMP has difficulty in maintaining services as things stand," Wiersema told a news conference.

"There are a number of fundamental issues that have to be resolved at the RCMP."
INTERIM AUDITOR GENERAL JOHN WIERSEMA

"The federal government, working with provincial, territorial and municipal partners, needs to decide which police services should be provided and how they should be delivered and funded."

Backlogs and delays in updating criminal record information had increased to 14 months for English updates and 36 months for French updates from five months in 2000, he found.

Overall, the outstanding criminal record update backlog had jumped to 1.4 million from 186,000 in 2005-06.

"I think that's of serious concern," Wiersema said.

The RCMP spent about $194 million on the national police services last year, but received only $164 million in funding for them, said Peter Henschel, the force's assistant commissioner for forensic science and identification services.

"That gap is growing, I would say," he said in an interview, adding that it may no longer be possible to pull money from other programs. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Budget slashed

The RCMP has trimmed programs to help fund national police services.

- The RCMP's federal international operations directorate — which has responsibility for organized crime probes, border integrity and drug enforcement — had to slash its budget by almost $48 million, or eight per cent, in the last fiscal year.

Feds fail to provide water, homes to First Nations: AG

The quality of life on reserves is deteriorating and Ottawa needs to overhaul its approach to funding First Nations programs, says Sheila Fraser in her report to Parliament as auditor general. Education, adequate housing, clean drinking water and child welfare are all in an "unacceptable" state, despite a stack of initiatives and money over 10 years. THE CANADIAN PRESS

New wording not worth a 'fig,' Rae says

Interim Liberal Leader Bob Rae said the more cautious wording of the auditor general's final report on G8 spending makes no difference.

Reservists face 7-year wait on pension details: Report

The Defence Department "dropped the ball" when it set up a pension plan for reservists, the auditor general says.

Vancouver has long had a reputation of being a bandwagon city. When the team is playing well, fans are giddy, loud and a little obnoxious. When the team plays poorly, fans are quick to turn on them.

Fans who gathered at Rogers Arena to watch Game 4 on the centre ice scoreboard Thursday night serenaded goaltender Roberto Luongo with a Bronx cheer when he was yanked after four goals.

Family with autistic boy won't be deported: Source

Immigration Minister Jason Kenney will rescind a deportation order for a South Korean family at the centre of a growing public protest in New Brunswick now that the province has confirmed it will cover health costs associated with the family's autistic son, a federal source confirmed Thursday.

The Maeng family's story attracted national attention after federal officials said the family had to leave Canada by June 30 because providing health care and social services for 14-year-old Sung-Joo would put too much strain on the system.

On Wednesday, the New Brunswick government responded to growing public outrage by handing a private letter to the Moncton family confirming the province will cover the costs.

Sung-Joo's mother, Hee-Eun Jang, said she was elated with the decision.

"I feel good, awesome, very good," she said in an interview from the family's grocery store. She said the support the family received from across Canada was "unbelievable."

An online petition supporting the family's wish to stay in Canada had attracted 7,000 signatures, and a protest rally was scheduled for Sunday in Moncton.

RCMP investigate apparent murder-suicide involving four members of young family in Nunavut

Sheila Levy was on her way to an Iqaluit school Thursday morning to counsel the classmates of a little girl who was one of four victims in an apparent murder-suicide the previous day. But before she could talk to the children, she first had to comfort the cabbie.

"He knew the family and knew everybody.

"There's not anyone in this community that's not affected by this sad state of events."

Experts and front-line workers in the North wonder why efforts to address one of Nunavut's biggest public-health issues remain so scattershot.

Sylvain Degrasse, 44, was found by police at Iqaluit's cemetery in the afternoon, a gun by his side. They found three more bodies at his home: His partner Vivian Sula Enuaraq, 29, and their daughters Alexandra, 7, and Aliyah, 2.

RCMP refused to confirm reports from local residents that Degrasse was found dead on the grave of his sister, who had committed suicide.

The four bodies will be taken to Ottawa for autopsies. The deaths are being treated as homicides but the RCMP say they are not searching for any suspects.

Both suicide and family violence are appallingly common in Nunavut.

A 2009 report by NTI found Inuit men between 15 and 24 kill themselves at a rate roughly 28 times that of their peers in southern Canada — about 600 per 100,000. The overall suicide rate for Inuit is 11 times the Canadian average .

Tories in full celebration mode

Conservative Party members have descended on Ottawa for a three-day conference that began Thursday night with rounds of speeches poking fun at the opposition, the media and even the Senate page who interrupted the throne speech by striding onto the floor holding a sign demanding Prime Minister Stephen Harper be stopped.

Minutes into former minister Stockwell Day's address to the roughly 2,000 people gathered at the Ottawa Convention Centre, his wife Valerie strode onto the stage holding a red stop sign with the words "We Love Harper."

The bit of political theatre showcased the party's arrogantly victorious mood as it headed into a policy weekend just weeks after winning its coveted majority government, taking 166 of the 308 seats in the House of Commons.

The campaign catchphrase "strong stable Conservative majority government" made its way into every single speech, as did jibes at the new Opposition — the New Democrats.

Master of ceremonies Stephen Blaney, who is the veterans' affairs minister, joked he was one of the only Quebec MPs who didn't need a map to find his riding — a poke at all the fresh-faced New Democrat MPs who, in at least one case, had never been to the riding in which they were elected.

But Day suggested digs at the NDPers should no longer be de rigeur in Parliament and called for a return to civility in the House, including from the media.

The now elder statesman also cautioned that the cocksure attitude doesn't mean the election victory can be taken for granted.

"We have to earn the right to have those votes," Day said.

Immigration Minister Jason Kenney suggested in his speech that the party had more than earned the right, taking delegates through each step the party took to win its majority.

He said only the Conservatives were truly in touch with Canadian values and celebrated the taking of Toronto-area ridings as proof.

Mitt Romney roasted over global warming

Republican U.S. presidential hopeful in hot water for his views on climate change ◗ Many Republicans deny existence of any problem

Republican presidential hopeful Mitt Romney is feeling the heat — over climate change.

Trouble is, he believes it's real.

And that's why top U.S. conservatives are blazing a new warpath against the former Massachusetts governor.

"Bye-bye, nomination," radio host Rush Limbaugh, a guiding light for hardcore conservatives, said this week after Romney stated publicly that the planet is getting warmer.

"Another one down … the last year has established that the whole premise of man-made global warming is a hoax, and we still have presidential candidates that want to buy into it."

"His run for president as a Republican is now officially over."
CHARLES JOHNSON, ON A CONSERVATIVE WEBSITE

Among the field of potential Republican candidates, only Romney's fellow Mormon, Jon Huntsman, believes climate change is not a hoax.

A recent Gallup poll, however, suggested that even though Americans are less worried about global warming than they were a few years ago, it's still a concern.

The survey also suggested Americans trust the science behind climate change.

And Weiner admits he tweeted sexually charged photos and messages to six women, then lied about it to his wife, his family and his constituents.

But "I'm not" quitting, he told the New York Post Thursday.

Amid the embarrassment, it was revealed his wife, Huma Abedin, is pregnant. She's a top aide to U.S. Secretary of State Hillary Clinton.

Rick Tyler, Gingrich's spokesperson, said he, campaign manager Rob Johnson and senior strategists had resigned, along with other aides.

Gingrich, 67, is one of the better known Republican candidates, but his campaign has been hurt by some of his off-the-cuff comments. His extramarital affairs and three marriages also do not sit well with social conservatives, the party's core voters.

TALES OF REVOLT

Fleeing Syrians tell all

Syrian policemen turned their guns on each other, soldiers shed their uniforms rather than fire on protesters, and three young men were beheaded by forces loyal to President Bashar Assad.

As more than 2,400 Syrians streamed across the open Turkish borders Thursday, they told the first accounts of a week of revolt, mutiny and mayhem in Jisra al-Shughour.

Even safe in Turkish camps, the Syrians said they feared the authoritarian government.

The struggle over Jisr al-Shughour and the surrounding Idlib province is a critical test for the 40-year Assad regime.

Syrian activists say more than 1,300 people have died, most of them unarmed civilians; a government spokeswoman countered that 500 security forces had died.

The UN has accused Syria of trying to "bludgeon its population into submission" by attacking protesters.

Activists say more than 10,000 people have been detained since March. The Syrian government has blamed the violence on gunmen and religious militants.

NATO strikes again

Despite inability to oust Gadhafi, preparations are made for new era in Libya Donors pledge $1.3 billion US to support main opposition group

NATO airstrikes rattled the Libyan capital Thursday with clusters of bombing runs believed to have targeted the outskirts of Tripoli.

At first, the intensity of the attacks suggested a return to the heavy NATO bombardment that hit a military installation Tuesday and flattened buildings in leader Moammar Gadhafi's compound.

By Thursday night, a total of 14 air attacks had been carried out, considerably less than Tuesday.

The strikes are in support of a four-month-old rebel uprising that seeks to push Gadhafi from power after four decades. Rebels have taken control of swaths of eastern Libya, although fighting has since become a stalemate even with NATO support.

Gadhafi shows no signs of ceding power, despite repeated attacks.

But the chief of the U.S. CIA, Leon Panetta, said Thursday that the NATO military operation, strong economic sanctions and enforcement of the no-fly zone are putting tremendous pressure on Gadhafi.

U.S. Secretary of State Hillary Rodham Clinton also said that there are "numerous and continuing" overtures by people close to Gadhafi to negotiate his departure from power.

But on Wednesday, Gadhafi forces renewed their shelling near the western city of Misrata, killing 10 rebel fighters.

NATO secretary general Anders Fogh Rasmussen said: "It is an example that the Gadhafi regime still constitutes a threat to the civilian population. We will stay committed as long as necessary."

But it found the Chicago businessman guilty of charges relating to the plot against the Danish paper that was never carried out and supporting the Pakistani militant group Lashkar-e-Taiba.

Calgary homeless man loses battle against cancer

- Brother was at his side after 33 years apart
- Terry Pettigrew lived at Calgary's Drop-In Centre for four years

A homeless Calgary man who became a minor celebrity when he asked to go to Mardi Gras after being diagnosed with cancer has died.

Terry Pettigrew became too sick and never actually went on the trip, despite having someone offer to pay for his fare. The media attention, however, led to a reunion with his long-lost brother. In the weeks leading up to his death, the pain resulted in Pettigrew being unable to walk and he was moved to a hospice May 13.

"It was a sad day. I was the one that had to take him up in the cab," said Christa Bistretzan, a medical service assistant and close friend of Pettigrew's. "He was full of emotion because that was the first step towards death." With his older brother Larry at his bedside, Pettigrew died of Stage 3 squamous cancer on the morning of May 31. He was 58. HOW TERRY CHANGED ME

KATIE TURNER

There are certain instances in life where something clicks inside you and you know your life has changed.

Terry Pettigrew was in his bunk bed when I went up to meet him. "Tell her if she wants to talk to me she's going to have to come closer," Pettigrew told a worker. "I don't bite."

From there on out, my interactions with him were full of humour, honesty and an unparallel sense of kindness.

He often touted that he was just a grumpy old pervert, but the truth is he would willingly give you the shirt off his back.

He mentioned several times that his goal was to leave a positive stamp on the Earth. Mission accomplished, Terry.

Death for honour killings

Couple shot and buried by family
In May, India's top court called the practice barbaric and feudal

The father and brother of a 20-year-old Indian woman have been sentenced to death for killing her and her husband for marrying within the same Hindu clan, police said Thursday.

Eight other family members also were given the death penalty Wednesday for the killings three years ago in the northern Uttar Pradesh state, said Brij Lal, a top police officer. The defendants can appeal to a higher court.

Judge Rajendra Babu Singh said the punishments should serve as a lesson to all those who kill in the name of saving family honour. Last month, India's top court recommended the death penalty for perpetrators of honour killings, calling the practice barbaric and feudal.

900 A study found that around 900 people are killed each year in India for defying their elders. Most victims are young adults who fell in love or married against their families' wishes. In some cases, village councils ordered couples killed who married inside their clan or outside their caste.

The 10 defendants were convicted of killing Vijaya and Udaipal Singh. Vijaya Singh's parents opposed the marriage but she defied them, eloping with her lover and getting married secretly in a Hindu temple.

The couple were shot to death and buried in a paddy field. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Face veil ban upheld in Spain

A Spanish court has upheld a ban on face-covering Islamic veils worn in municipal buildings. In 2010, Lleida became the first Spanish city to impose the ban. The Catalan Regional Superior Justice Tribunal suspended it following an appeal by a Muslim association. The court ruled Wednesday that the city was within its rights to ban the clothing for security and identification purposes. It also backed the argument that the veils are discriminatory. About three per cent of Lleida's population is Muslim and few wear face-covering garments. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Henchmen's leather coat to return

The long black leather coats that struck fear into Soviet citizens as part of the ominous dress code for Stalin's secret police, NKVD, appear to be making a comeback.

The security forces who guard President Dmitry Medvedev and Prime Minister Vladimir Putin are holding a state tender for 60 such coats and 60 shorter jackets. The website for state tenders showed the order is worth $108,000 US.

Stalin's secret police carried out the repression and purges of the 1930s. The officers executed hundreds of thousands of people and ran labour camps. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Indian guru vows no arms

A charismatic yoga guru has pledged to train his followers in self-defence and traditional martial arts but said they would never take up arms in fighting India's endemic corruption.

Baba Ramdev, a television celebrity watched by millions of viewers, was on the sixth day of a hunger strike Thursday to demand the return of billions of dollars stashed abroad illegally in tax havens by companies and wealthy Indians.

A police raid forced Ramdev and thousands of his followers from a New Delhi park Sunday, injuring dozens and sparking enormous public outrage.

Ramdev temporarily avoided police by disguising himself in women's clothing and resumed his protest Monday from his spiritual retreat in Haridwar on the banks of the Ganges River.

"We neither support nor intend to take the law in our hand. We don't mean either training of guns, bombs or practice of killing someone or being violent at any point of time."
A STATEMENT FROM BABA RAMDEV'S OFFICE

News reports Wednesday said the guru was planning to arm thousands of supporters to block any new police action to disrupt the fast, but his office quickly denied it and said he had been quoted out of context. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Dutch recall beet sprouts

Only one Dutch grower was found with E. coli-tainted beets

Dutch authorities recalled red beet sprouts from three countries Thursday after samples were found to be contaminated with a strain of E. coli bacteria that was apparently less dangerous than the one causing Europe's deadly E. coli crisis.

German health officials, meanwhile, reported that three more people died of the ailment Thursday, raising the toll to 29 in less than six weeks.

The Dutch Food Safety Authority said laboratories were still trying to identify the Dutch strain of E. coli, but said there have been no immediate reports of serious illness from it.

Still, the agency said it was definitely not the same E. coli strain that killed 29 people, sickened 2,900 others and left hundreds with serious complications, most of them in Germany. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

E. coli bacteria

- Deadly There are hundreds of E. coli bacteria strains in nature, but only a few are deadly to humans and the bacteria is more commonly known as a source of food poisoning or severe stomach problems.
- Harmless strains People naturally carry several harmless E. coli strains in their intestines and the bacteria is also widely found in cows, sheep and other mammals.

Russia faces surge in forest fires: Officials

Country's forests constitute 22 per cent of world's total woodlands, an area larger than continental U.S.

A devastating wave of wildfires across Russia could ravage millions of hectares of forests and cause worse damage than last year's catastrophic blazes, environmentalists and officials said Thursday.

"We're burning, burning badly," Greenpeace's forestry expert, Alexey Yaroshenko, said. "This year's situation is already much worse than last year's."

In 2010, an unprecedented heat wave triggered fires that killed 55 people, destroyed thousands of houses and torched 2.6 million hectares of forests — an area slightly larger than the state of Oregon.

This year, three firefighters have died and dozens of wildfires have already engulfed more than 600,000 hectares of mainly Siberian forests — nearly three times more territory than this time last year, the Emergencies Ministry said.

Once ignited, peat bogs can smoulder for months or years, surviving even heavy rains and snow. While burning, they emit acrid smoke that can aggravate asthma, bronchitis and heart conditions.

Last year, Moscow was engulfed in a thick blanket of smog that, combined with the intense heat, doubled the death rate.

Moscow authorities have allocated some $150 million to flood the peat bogs, but Greenpeace said that little has been done due to corruption and bureaucracy.

"What's been done is a drop in the ocean," Yaroshenko said.

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Kremlin's control

- Silenced Greenpeace claimed the Russian government is silencing information about fires, especially about the renewal of peat bog fires around Moscow that last year cloaked the capital with acrid, toxic smoke.
- Greenpeace "There are dozens of them around Moscow," Greenpeace's Grigory Kuksin said.

Experts predict hotter summers later this century

A new study from Stanford University predicts that global climate change will lead permanently to unusually hot summers by the middle of the century. Researchers Noah S. Diffenbaugh and Martin Scherer analyzed global climate computer models and concluded that large areas of the world could face unprecedented heat later this century. They said the coolest summers will be hotter than the hottest ones of the 1900s.

Season's 1st hurricane becomes major storm

Hurricane Adrian is strengthening off the Pacific coast of Mexico and is now a major hurricane. Forecasters say maximum sustained winds for the first hurricane of the 2011 season increased Thursday to about 185 kilometres per hour.

The U.S. National Hurricane Center in Miami predicts that the storm's centre will stay well offshore. Late Wednesday, Adrian's maximum sustained winds were about 130 km/h and it was expected to get stronger.

The centre of the storm was about 708 kilometres south-southeast of Cabo Corrientes.

Showbiz royalty to greet the royals

William and Kate will enjoy coast-to-coast talent on Canada Day ◆ Parliament Hill message: 'We're proud'

Prince William and his new bride will be entertained by a coast-to-coast roster of Canadian talent on Canada Day.

Performers for the royal couple on Parliament Hill include the Newfoundland band Great Big Sea, Quebec's Sam Roberts Band and Winnipeg's Maria Aragon.

Ten-year-old Aragon gained fans around the world after a video of her performing a Lady Gaga song was posted on YouTube.

She has since played with Lady Gaga herself, as well as with Prime Minister Stephen Harper.

Other featured artists at the noontime show include Dan Mangan from B.C., Elisapie Issac from Nunavut and folk singer Jenn Grant from P.E.I.

85

There are an estimated 85 international media travelling to Canada to cover Prince William and Catherine's trip.

Altogether, there are more than 105 acts performing for Canada's 144 birthday, which is also being billed a celebration of the centennial of Parks Canada and the 120th anniversary of the Canadian invention of basketball.

Exposure provided by the royal guests drove the show's producers to put on the biggest spectacle they could, said Marie Lemay, the chief executive officer of the National Capital Commission, which is overseeing the show.

"It's a time for Canadians to show the world how proud we are," Lemay said.

The Duke and Duchess of Cambridge, as they are now known, arrive in Canada June 30 for an eight-day visit.

It's their first official tour since their April wedding.

Conrad Black not elitist: Lawyer

Defence team wants harmful testimony tossed Says it's a smear job

One of Conrad Black's lawyers has lashed out at U.S. prosecutors, accusing them of launching a "shameful" smear campaign to influence his resentencing hearing.

Carolyn Gurland also demanded that the scathing testimony of two prison workers this month be thrown out of court. Gurland said the portrayal of Black in their affidavits as a haughty aristocrat who shirked responsibility and treated other inmates as servants is "demonstrably false."

"The notion that Conrad Black is some sort of arrogant elitist" has been "debunked," she said in documents filed to a U.S. Supreme Court in Illinois late Wednesday.

Black's resentencing is June 30. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Roadway will salute B.C.'s fallen soldiers

A stretch of the Trans-Canada Highway near Vancouver has been designated the Highway of Heroes to honour B.C. soldiers who have died in Afghanistan.

The B.C. provincial government made the designation after a request from Honour House, a non-profit facility opening this month that will offer soldiers, first responders and their families, a place to stay while receiving medical treatment.

A large sign along the highway between Langley and Abbotsford will be unveiled this weekend during an annual motorcycle ride by veterans.

It's the second such designation in Canada. The roadway between Canadian Forces Base Trenton and Toronto was named the Highway of Heroes in 2007. THE CANADIAN PRESS

TV networks up online ad ante

With changing viewer habits, stations are boosting online commercials Still make more money from TV

One of the rewards of watching TV online is not having to sit through as many commercials. Now the networks are chipping away at that little luxury.

CBS shows twice as many ads per show on its website as it did last year. The CW network shows four times as many. Dozens of shows from major cable networks now carry as many ads online as they do on TV. More shows will follow soon.

The online audience is still small compared with television, but it's growing. Networks hope that by showing more ads, they can make about as much money per viewer online as they do on the tube.

TV vs. Internet

- In the beginning, limiting commercials kept people from going to unauthorized websites to watch pirated copies of shows.
- It also helped networks reach new audiences in college dorms and teenage bedrooms.
- On average, U.S. residents spent about 160 hours per month in front of the tube in early 2010 and only seven watching video on a computer or phone, according to Nielsen Co.

It's a change from the early days of online video. When ABC started putting full episodes of its shows online in 2006, fans could zip through the hour-long dramas Lost and Desperate Housewives in about 45 minutes.

A recent episode of Hawaii Five-O had six and a half minutes of ads online. That's less than the 16 minutes on TV but double what an hour-long show carried on CBS.com a year ago.

In recent years, faster Internet connections and better technology have led some people to give up on regular TV — and hefty cable bills that come with it — and watch only online.

Competition keeps airfares grounded

- Transat forced to swallow rising fuel costs
- Success depends on nearly full planes this summer

Travellers on Transat airlines won't pay higher costs to fly to Europe this summer as increased competition is constraining its ability to raise fares to offset rising fuel prices.

Transat A.T. Inc. said it cannot raise fares sufficiently to accommodate a 30 per cent rise in fuel costs.

"Including everything, from the client perspective, prices are flat," Denis Petrin, chief financial officer, said Thursday.

Although fuel surcharges are higher, they are being balanced by lower base fares.

Transat has boosted its summer capacity to Europe by 15 per cent, even though it faces increased competition from Sunwing, Air Canada and other carriers.

PAUL CHIASSON/THE CANADIAN PRESS

▶ Jean-Marc Eustache

About 60 per cent of its bookings to the transatlantic market have been sold so far. Flying the planes nearly full is key to its continued success on the summer routes.

The desire to travel remains strong despite the lingering impact of the economic slowdown, added CEO Jean-Marc Eustache.

"What we know from Canada is that people are still travelling more than ever," he told analysts.

Transat said its second-quarter profits grew to $8.6 million as the company booked stronger revenues but also grappled with higher fuel prices.

Revenue grew to $1.1 billion from $1.06 billion, an increase of $40.7 million that the company attributes to higher average selling prices for tour packages due to bigger fuel surcharges. THE CANADIAN PRESS

MONEY TALKS

FINANCIAL ADVICE FOR NEW CANADIANS

Q I'm new to Canada. How important is it for me to establish a good credit history?

COMSTOCK/THINKSTOCK

A You won't be able to borrow money for any significant purchase unless you have a good credit history — and chances are, your credit history back home won't be factored in. So let's look at your options here in Canada.

First, a little background: Your credit history is a list of facts gathered from financial institutions, retailers and other lenders — the evidence, really, of how you handled credit in the past. Canada's central credit bureaus keep track of how Canadians borrow and repay money, then create a credit score for borrowers. Your good credit score is proof to other potential lenders that you pay your bills, and pay them on time. So how do you earn one?

"One great way is with a credit card," says Melissa Jarman, Product Manager, Cards and Payment Solutions at RBC. "They're essential for certain purchases, like renting a car or shopping online. They're also a convenient — and safe — way to pay for things without carrying around large sums of cash. Even if you already have a credit card from another country, it's a good idea to get a Canadian one too."

An instalment loan is another way to build your credit history. "Instalment loans help you develop good cashflow management and budgeting habits," says Lee Arruda, Product Manager, Personal Lending Products at RBC.

"You pay the same amount every month until your loan is covered. At the same time, you're proving you're responsible and organized with your money."

Obviously, it's important to make your credit card and loan payments on time. If you can't make your full credit card payment, at least pay the minimum — it's much better than missing a payment altogether.

Resources are available to help you learn more. Some of your questions may be answered by contacting Citizenship and Immigration Canada (www.cic.gc.ca). You can also seek out advice from organizations in your own province, such as the B.C. government's "Ask the Expert" service, part of WelcomeBC.ca, or Ontario's Settlement.org. Immigration et Communautés culturelles Québec, part of the Quebec government, deals with a range of immigration-related financial matters that may impact your ability to build a good credit history. And don't forget to talk to your banker. He or she is in the business of helping you succeed, and a good credit history is key to making that happen.

1 Weinergate. After a failed coverup, married New York congressman Anthony Weiner finally admitted to sexting exchanges with six women, including a tweet photo sent to one of him in bulging underpants. He hasn't tweeted @RepWeiner in a week, playing it safe as "Weinergate" keeps getting bigger and bigger.

2 Green Men. The popularity — and brand — of these two super fans is growing during Vancouver's Stanley Cup run. "Green Men" merchandise at greenmengear.com, 163,000 fans on Facebook, 30,000 followers on Twitter @thegreenmen — who would have thunk lime green suits could be so cool.

"Lesson learned: Teen house parties pre-FB were much tamer. And, in retrospect, much preferable to parents."

3 Star Wars or Star Trek? A new paperback compendium called Star Wars vs. Star Trek: Could The Empire Kick The Federation's Ass? purports to quell the decades-long debate of which is better. Didn't know there was a debate: A lightsaber could deflect a beam from a phaser any day.

4 Bobcaygeon in Bobcaygeon. The Tragically Hip play Bobcaygeon, Ont., June 25 on a 175-acre waterfront site as part of Big Music Fest. Let's see: The Hip singing its hit Bobcaygeon in Bobcaygeon to thousands of fans drinking Canadian beer in cottage country. Yep, couldn't get much more Canadian than that, eh?

5 Tina Fey is Sarah Palin on Fox. Oops — during a segment on Sarah Palin, Fox News meant to use a pic of Palin but instead displayed one of Tina Fey doing an old SNL impersonation of Palin. Either this was a huge blunder or a prank from a Democrat graphics department intern gone wild on their last day.

6 Private Facebook party very public. A German teen forgot to set her Facebook "event" 16th birthday party to private. The invite went viral and 1,500 partygoers showed up outside her house. Lesson learned: Teen house parties pre-FB were much tamer. And, in retrospect, much preferable to parents.

7 Winnipeg. Retro Winnipeg Jets tees and merch are coming out of the woodwork across the country now that Winnipeg has an NHL franchise again. Now if only they would decide on a name ... gotta be the Jets again! And to go more retro, can we bring back the Quebec Nordiques?

8 Thriller jacket. The iconic red and black jacket MJ wore in his Thriller video is being auctioned off in a couple weeks at a gallery in Beverly Hills, Calif., and is expected to fetch about $200,000 US. Worth mentioning

NEW YORK. After pressure from four U.S. senators, Apple Inc. has said it will start rejecting iPhone applications that tip drivers off about police checkpoints for drunken driving.

Apple updated its app developer guidelines Wednesday to exclude such apps. On Thursday, some DUI apps were still available in the App Store, but Apple usually gives developers a chance to update their apps so they can conform to the new guidelines before booting them.

The apps often combine warnings about DUI checkpoints with warnings about speed traps and red-light cameras. Users of the applications help create the warnings by registering the locations.

An Apple spokesman had no comment on the change in the guidelines and wouldn't say why the change was made.

The four senators asked Apple, Research In Motion Ltd., the maker of the BlackBerry, and Google Inc. to remove DUI-avoidance apps in March.

RIM complied, but Google refused.

The true definition of an inside job

A man was arrested in Spain after curling himself up inside a large suitcase that was placed in an airport bus cargo bay and sneaking out to steal from other people's luggage, police said Thursday.

The man arrested last week was five-foot-10 and very thin, a police official in the northeastern Catalonia region said. An accomplice was also arrested.

The accomplice would place the contortionist thief inside the cargo bay of a bus running from the airport in the city of Girona south to Barcelona, board the bus and then retrieve him at the end of the line.

During the 100-kilometre ride, the man would slip out of the suitcase and use a sharp object to pick locks or open zippers to get into other people's luggage, police said.

He stole objects including cellphones, laptops and GPS devices and would place them in a smaller bag he brought with him. The thief would then get back into the larger suitcase and when the bus reached its destination, the accomplice would retrieve both pieces of luggage.

Super 8 is super great

Richard Crouse and Mark Breslin agree there's a lot to like about Super 8
Director J.J. Abrams draws out the suspense, with Spielbergian flourishes

Richard Crouse: Mark, J.J. Abrams directs Super 8 the way he produced the TV show Lost. He draws out the suspense, doling out just enough detail, shocks and surprises to keep the story interesting and moving forward. He knows that the strength of the movie isn't the special effects or the whatever-it-is that is causing all the trouble, but the relationship between the kids. Call it Stand By Me with a giant bug... or a monster... or something. I'm not saying what!

Mark Breslin: All true, but you can feel Steven Spielberg's hand guiding the movie all the way along. The suburban flyover state setting, the gentle outsider child protagonists, the deceased parent, the bicycles, the alien who just wants to go home, all Spielberg motifs. And setting it in the early '80s, when Spielberg had his big sci-fi hits, surely was no coincidence.

RC: Perhaps so, but despite the Spielbergian flourishes, this still very much feels like an Abrams creation to me. His fingerprints are all over the action sequences — particularly the out-of-control train wreck scene — and even the sweetness we've come to associate with Spielberg has been dialled back. It's still there — very much so in the film's last 10 minutes — but Abrams manages to set the tone as though he is paying homage to the saccharine tendencies of his mentor than actually aping him.

MB: That train wreck scene had me on the edge of my seat! But the rest of the picture did not exactly exude menace. It's more of a character piece about the young teens, and I thought the kids were great, certainly more interesting than the adults (which may be one of the points of the movie). I liked the picture, and my only real quibble was that the kids' filmmaking, which played such an important part in the beginning of the movie, is dropped midway through the flick. The scenes of those kids making movies were dripping with charm.

RC: I thought so too. Those scenes had a sense of fun to them and established the personalities of all the main kid characters. I think I liked this one more than you. I thought Super 8 was super great.

MB: Well, the middle was a bit soft and I'm always skeptical about courageous 14-year-olds. Still, there's a lot to like in this one.

Up close and personal with Mr. Popper's Penguins

James Tupper stars alongside aquatic actors in movie version of children's book But was more intimidated by Jim Carrey — at first

RICHARD CROUSE
SCENE@METRONEWS.CA

James Tupper, the Nova Scotia-born star of Mr. Popper's Penguins, calls his co-stars "ornery."

No, he's not talking about Jim Carrey or Angela Lansbury. He's referring to the movie's aquatic, flightless actors.

"They kind of look like toddlers wearing a tuxedo with their chests sticking out in this really open, sweet way," he says. "But when you get close to them they will give you a nip."

To accommodate the birds, the film's set was kept below zero. "You could see your breath all day long," says Tupper.

As for working with the penguins, he says they're not great actors, but performing opposite the Antarctic imports was less strange than acting without them.

Computer-generated penguins were used for several scenes, which meant Tupper would have to emote to a mark on the wall.

"There would just be a dot on the wall and they would put the penguin in later. Sometimes the director would be back there saying, 'Oh! Oh! I'm going to bite you!' and act stuff out for you to react to but we all got this weird 'acting to the dot' effect."

Tupper, best known for his work on television shows like Men In Trees (where he co-starred with his fiancée Anne Heche) and Grey's Anatomy, says the penguins weren't the set's most intimidating presence. At first anyway.

"It was a little bit intimidating when I first met him," he says of Jim Carrey. "He slapped me on the back and was like, 'Jim or James?' I said, 'You know what. I think you've probably got Jim covered. I'm going to stick with James.'"

That intimidation soon gave way to a lively collaboration.

"He's really fun. It's a playful set. He improvises a lot and generally has the crew chuckling most of the day."

James, however, wasn't the only member of his family impressed with Carrey. His nine-year-old son is also a fan.

"When we read the book Mr. Popper's Penguins to him in bed, he got so excited when he found out Jim Carrey was in it.

He said, 'Can you please get Jim Carrey to sign it?' So I did. I took it to New York and he signed it and I brought it back and I said, 'Would you like me to sign it too?' No! Why! I said, 'Cut me a break. I'm in the movie.'"

Exploring the evil deeds

Michael Sheen speaks to Metro about how difficult his role was in the new film Beautiful Boy

NED EHRBAR
SCENE@METRONEWS.CA
METRO WORLD NEWS IN LOS ANGELES

Beautiful Boy examines the tragedy of a school shooting from an as-yet-under-explored viewpoint: The parents (Michael Sheen and Maria Bello) of the massacre's perpetrator. It proved to be a thought-provoking and emotionally intense job for Sheen, who sat down with Metro to talk about his role.

This film deals with some heavy material. How do you approach playing so much grief and guilt?

In some ways, it's the same as anything. Regardless of what the subject matter is, you have to have a playfulness. We're pretending. It doesn't matter what you're pretending — how heavy or serious the subject matter is — you're still pretending. And that has to have a sense of joy in it. It's a game, ultimately. It might be a very serious game, but it's still a game. I think in a way the pitfall or the trap that you can fall into when you're doing something that is, quote-unquote, heavy and serious is that somehow you've got to be heavy and serious all the time with it.

TOBY CANHAM/GETTY IMAGES

▶ Michael Sheen plays the parent of a perpetrator of a heinous crime.

You just tire yourself out. You can't sustain that. Then it just becomes one big heavy mess.

Was it like that on this set?

Definitely, yeah. I think me and Maria had done a lot of work beforehand, and we'd sort of established a trust and a comfort level between ourselves as actors. So in between, we weren't trying to prove anything to each other or anyone else about how in it we were or how much we understood the material. We could just be ourselves and just keep the relationship fizzing and alive so that when we went into the scenes that carried over.

It's an interesting position your character is in, being the parent of the perpetrator.

From a dramatic point of view, for the parents of the students who have been tragically killed, there's the grief that they feel about what has happened. In some ways, it's less dramatic — and I'm not saying it's less important, I'm saying it's less dramatic. It's a straight line, in a way. For the parents of the person who has perpetrated the crime, they're feeling the grief for their child, but they're feeling grief for a child who has done something, quote-unquote, evil. From a dramatic point of view, there is a lot of untapped material there, I guess.

Judy Moody And The Not A Bummer Summer

Genre: Family
Director: Jordana Beatty, Heather Graham, Parris Mosteller

Yet another children's film filled with bright colours, slapstick comedy and performances broad enough for a Christmas pantomime. It's about a young girl who desperately wants to have an exciting summer, but ends up stuck with a strange aunt, a Bigfoot-obsessed brother and no friends. Somehow I've got a feeling that lessons of acceptance and secret excitement are just around the corner. It's all a bit grating, coated in a stink of desperation from filmmakers who are desperately trying to appeal to young audiences they don't understand. If your kids enjoy the book, then the film might be worth a look. Otherwise, stay as far away as possible. PHIL BROWN

Cell 213

Genre: Horror
Director: Stephen Kay
Stars: Eric Balfour, Bruce Greenwood, Michael Rooker

Underrated actor Eric Balfour (Skyline) once again delivers a solid performance in this dark supernatural Canadian shocker and he's supported by a cast of equally reliable thesps like Bruce Greenwood and Michael Rooker. The movie itself isn't nearly as good as its talent, however, filled as it is with jittery post-SAW camera work and hammy plot contrivances. Balfour's hotshot lawyer gets sent upstate unjustly and is soon running afoul of creepy ghosts and creepier clichés (corrupt warden, brutish guard, hulking prison yard rapist). Worth watching for its lead though, and some truly stomach churning gore effects. CHRIS ALEXANDER

The Tree of Life

Genre: Drama
Director: Terrence Malick
Stars: Brad Pitt, Sean Penn, Jessica Chastain

Terrence Malick's movies aren't for everyone. The revered auteur behind films like Badlands doesn't conventionally direct a narrative rather than suggest it and The Tree of Life is no different. Impossible to describe in a sentence, the big prize-winner at the Cannes Film Festival explores a 1950s family (led by Brad Pitt in a stunning performance) dealing with the loss of a child intercut with lengthy musings on the evolution of life, the universe and everything. It can be a cumbersome experience at times but a refreshing pause from the mindless summer blockbuster. STEVE GOW

Submarine

Genre: Comedy
Director: Richard Ayoade
Stars: Craig Roberts, Sally Hawkins, Paddy Considine

Darkplace creator Richard Ayoade transitions into feature film directing with this surprisingly dark coming-of-age comedy about an awkward teen, the eczema scarred arsonist he loves and the new age guru trying to steal his mother. It's a shockingly assured directorial debut for the former TV comic that may riff a little too heavily on Ayoade's cinematic influences, but that's excusable on a first effort. Ayoade's acidic wit keeps the laughs coming and he also proves to have a surprising knack for emotional drama and guiding the performances of young actors. Ayoade could be a first-class filmmaker in the making. PHIL BROWN

Loose Cannons

Genre: Comedy, Art House
Director: Ferzan Ozpetek
Stars: Riccardo Scamarcio

In the Italian rom-com, Tommaso is upstaged by his brother after he decides to come out of the closet to his stern family. Tommaso struggles with keeping his sexuality secret and running the family business under a homophobic patriarch. The performances are decent enough but the film loses distinction when his overplayed gay pals suddenly arrive. STEVE GOW

Beauty Day

Genre: Documentary
Director: Jay Cheel
Stars: Ralph Zavadil

A wonderfully bizarre documentary that falls somewhere between Jackass and The Wrestler. The subject is Ralph Zavadil, a man who under the name Cap'n Video practically invented home video stunt/gross-out comedy on his Ontario public access TV series in the early '90s. Zavadil never achieved the fame of his followers, but there's something oddly inspiring about his lifelong dedication to idiotic behaviour. PHIL BROWN

'Peg writer offers up witchy new novel

One of Susie Moloney's earlier books commissioned by Tom Cruise's production company • Public appetite for supernatural fuelled by Twilight

RICHARD WAGNER/THE CANADIAN PRESS HANDOUT

▶ Author Susie Moloney had an interest in the supernatural from an early age, becoming fascinated with the Salem witch trials and the legend of the Sasquatch.

Susie Moloney experienced the thrill of fright at a very young age.

"My mother was a huge horror fan," explains the Winnipeg author, whose latest horror-tinged novel, The Thirteen, hit stores this week. "She would get scared watching scary movies late at night and she'd come wake us up to keep her company."

Moloney and her brother obliged. And although the author claims, with a laugh, to have slept with her head under the covers ever since, terror clearly titillates her.

"It's like anything else that gets the adrenalin going, you know? It's like falling in love, it's like having a damn fine laugh."

All of Moloney's books have delved into otherworldliness, from her chilling 1995 debut Bastion Falls to 1997's supernatural drought story A Dry Spell and 2003's haunted house tale The Dwelling.

The Thirteen marks her first foray into the world of witches. "I ... liked the idea of being a witch," explains Moloney, who has two sons.

"You have this image when you go into suburban living ... you imagine that your children are going to be perfect, brilliant, successful, talented, your house is going to be spotless and gorgeous...the reality sinks in that you cannot do this without witchcraft!"

Kings paying tribute to Queens

Blackie & the Rodeo Kings get guests Emmylou Harris, Lucinda Williams on new CD

HANDOUT/THE CANADIAN PRESS

Back in 1996, Tom Wilson recorded what he figured was a one-off project with Colin Linden and Stephen Fearing under the band name Blackie and the Rodeo Kings.

Wilson didn't think about it much. The group had been assembled to pay tribute to the late Canadian folk troubadour Willie P. Bennett, so it was a lark, a fun diversion. Wilson didn't even wait until the album was finished to leave and embark on his next project.

"We thought we were recording a record and that was it," Wilson said in a recent interview at a stylish Italian restaurant in Toronto.

"I said, 'It was great to meet you, Stephen.' Colin, I've known since our teens but never worked with him. I shook hands, and that was it. 'OK, good. Next' — that was what I thought.

"I was wrong."

Yes, 15 years later and Blackie and the Rodeo Kings are still riding along together, now set to issue another new album, Kings and Queens — the culmination of three years work and the group's first set of all-new material since the sessions that produced 2006's Juno-winning Let's Frolic and the '07 follow-up Let's Frolic Again.

The concept behind the new album was essentially to pair the roots-rock group's three unique voices with an all-star roster of female singers, including Lucinda Williams, Emmylou Harris, Exene Cervenka and Roseanne Cash. Linden jetted around North America — to Nashville, New Orleans, New York, Los Angeles and even Woodstock, N.Y. — with his computer to record the Queens.

And the trio now has glowing praise for each of the women featured on the album.

Sara Watkins was "really great." Serena Ryder, who sang on driving closer Black Sheep, was a "real powerhouse." And Cervenka? Well, Wilson was so enthusiastic about her performance he could only sum it up with an unprintable obscenity.

Mostly, though, the band raved about how their own vocals improved because of the presence of their 14 guests.

"We sang better," Wilson said.

"The same way that we're better men — better people — for the women that have surrounded our lives either on a long-term basis or a short-term basis, the same thing happened musically.

"We're better singers, better people."

THE CANADIAN PRESS

Surprise on tour?

The band says it's altogether possible that some of their guests from their new album could hop onstage with the group while on tour. They also raised the possibility that some female vocalists who weren't on the album might also be up for a duet.

THE FORMAT WARS

SOUND CHECK

ALAN CROSS
SCENE
@METRONEWS.CA

All throughout history, an established technology never had a chance if something more convenient came along. Just look at what we've seen with music over the last 140 years or so.

Cylinders vs. Rotating Discs
Thomas Edison's phonograph with its rotating wax or metal cylinders established that sound could be captured.

But then Emile Berliner showed that rotating flat discs played on his gramophone were far superior. Why? Better sound and because discs had a B-side — twice as much music for the same price.

Edison had no choice but to move from cylinder to disc.

Phonographs vs. Gramophones
The phonograph tracked grooves in the record by going up and down.

The gramophone's needle went from side-to-side.

This meant that phonograph records couldn't be played on gramophones and vice-versa, forcing consumers to take sides.

While it's true that Edison's machine delivered slightly better sound, the up-and-down motion of the steel needle wore out the record more quickly.

Undeterred by this minor issue, Edison stuck to his guns and refused to make any changes to his machine.

Ultimately, though, the gramophone won out and Edison stopped making phonographs and records entirely by about 1930.

78s vs. LPs
By the 1930s, the standard rotation rate for discs was 78 RPM, which meant that each record could store only about four minutes per side. Columbia Records changed that in 1948 with the introduction of the vinyl 33 ⅓ RPM LP (Long-Playing), a format that could store up to 22 minutes per side. From that moment, the 78 was doomed.

LPs vs. 45s
Although Columbia offered to license their new technology to rival RCA, they would have none of it. Instead, they countered with the vinyl 45 RPM 7-inch single in 1949. RCA contended that four or five minutes of music per side was all consumers really wanted. But if they did want more, they could simply stack 45s for continuous play on the large spindle of the brand new automatic RCA-manufactured record changer. (This is why the hole at the centre of a 45 is so big; the larger diameter was necessary to let the record slide down the spindle without prematurely fraying the area around hole.)

Inspirational teacher made Glee star succeed

Matthew Morrison releases self-titled debut album, set to tour

Turns out Glee star Matthew Morrison had his own Mr. Schue.

The curly-haired performer, who plays ultra upbeat glee-club instructor Will Schuester on the hit musical TV series, credits one high school teacher with helping him get where he is today.

"I was kind of like (the character) Finn on Glee," said Morrison, who recently released his self-titled debut album and will tour Canada this summer with the New Kids on the Block and Backstreet Boys.

"I kind of rode the line between arts and athletics. I was a huge soccer player, and my junior year of high school I had to choose between playing soccer and being in the arts. And one teacher, especially, his name is Dr. Ralph Opacic, he said: 'I've been at this awhile and you have something really special and I think you just need to continue down this road.'

"As an actor you can't get settled. I don't want to get settled into Glee."
MATTHEW MORRISON

"And that was the talk that changed my life. He was totally my Mr. Schue."

Despite the shocking disclosure that he fathered a child with their housekeeper and kept it secret for 13 years, Arnold Schwarzenegger is reportedly still hoping he and Maria Shriver can patch things up and avoid divorce, according to Popeater.

"He knows he has made terrible mistakes in his past but isn't prepared to lose the greatest woman in his life," a source close to the former California governor says. "This has nothing to do with money or the children. He misses her terribly and will do whatever it takes to win her back. Even begging."

▶ Strawberries can be employed in salads and also pair well with cheese.

Red and luscious, fresh locally grown strawberries are a treat that Canadians eagerly anticipate after a long winter. And the wait won't be much longer. Pickers are poised to harvest the juicy morsels.

Strawberry-Topped Brie

This colourful warm cheese makes a great party dish served with thin slices of baguette.

Preparation:

1. With sharp knife, remove the top rind from the brie cheese.
2. Place cheese in ovenproof dish just slightly bigger than cheese. If using liqueur, pour it over top. Sprinkle with brown sugar.
3. Arrange strawberries, stem side down, on cheese to cover top. Drizzle with syrup and sprinkle with nuts.
4. Place dish on unlit side of barbecue on medium heat. Close the lid of the barbecue and grill for about 15 minutes or until the cheese is soft and starts to ooze over the edge.

Curried Chicken & Strawberry Salad

This is the perfect use for leftover chicken. If you don't have cooked chicken, four boneless skinless chicken breasts, grilled, will give you enough.

Preparation:

1. In bowl, whisk mayo, sour cream, lime rind, lime juice, honey, curry powder, salt and pepper.
2. In a bowl, stir together chicken, celery and onions; pour dressing over top and toss lightly to mix.

How many wines are there in the world? The funny thing is, I don't know.

If you take a stab at counting grape varieties and multiply by worldwide wineries and all their individual brands and available vintages, you're easily talking millions.

That's why when you write about wine, it's easy to get caught up in the new and forget established juice.

I thought about that when I recently tried the stalwart Wolf Blass Eagle Hawk Shiraz ($13.00 - $13.99).

I was at a local resto with a limited wine list and took the waiter's suggestion of the 2009 vintage.

I do love how my preconceived notions of a wine can get the better of me and really got into how its dry-blackberry-meets-sweet-blueberry fruit and trail of inky, black licorice spice tasted so ...hip.

It's a perfect back deck red that would match with a nice piece of grilled beef as well as it would hamburgers. PRICES REFLECT THE RANGE ACROSS CANADA. SOME PRODUCTS MAY NOT BE AVAILABLE IN ALL PROVINCES.

After you pay these "consultants" a fee – hundreds, sometimes thousands of dollars – they refer you to a trustee to actually do the work (their ads don't tell you that).

Leafs reward Reimer with $5.4M extension

- Goalie expected to be starter next season after signing three-year deal
- Jean-Sebastien Giguere's future with team remains uncertain

BRUCE BENNETT/GETTY IMAGES

▶ James Reimer has signed a $5.4-million US, three-year extension with the Leafs.

The Toronto Maple Leafs are ready to run with James Reimer.

The 23-year-old goaltender capped off a dream season by signing a $5.4-million US, three-year contract extension Thursday. Reimer led the team on a surprising second-half turnaround after getting called up from the American Hockey League.

"He earned the opportunity to play at the NHL level this past season and he made the most of it with his outstanding play," Maple Leafs general manager Brian Burke said in a statement. "He really grabbed the net and never looked back. We are confident that his talent and strong work habits will be contributing factors to our team's success next season."

Reimer scored a big raise after finishing a rookie contract that paid him about $600,000 at the NHL level. He is expected to be the team's No. 1 goaltender next season.

Burke still has a decision to make on veteran goalie Jean-Sebastien Giguere, who had off-season sports hernia surgery and is due to become an unrestricted free agent July 1. Jonas Gustavsson is also under contract for next season.

Reimer wasn't touted as a top prospect by the organization until bursting on the scene in January. With Giguere and Gustavsson each out with injuries, he took over and went on to post a 20-10-5 record in 37 games with a 2.60 goals-against average and .921 save percentage.

It was an improbable run for the man from tiny Morweena, Man., who didn't start playing organized hockey until he was 12 and got drafted by the Leafs 99th overall in 2006.

The only thing even about the Stanley Cup final is the fact the Vancouver Canucks and Boston Bruins have each won two games.

The matter in which the Bruins surged back into this series with a pair of blowout victories on home ice was markedly different than the way Vancouver established an early 2-0 lead. It has created an interesting dynamic with the final shifting back to Rogers Arena Friday for Game 5 and a few more twists and turns expected on this emotional roller-coaster. Despite being outscored 12-1 at TD Garden in Games 3 and 4, opportunity is still knocking for a Vancouver team trying to bring the Stanley Cup back to Canada for the first time since 1993.

"You know, if somebody would have told me at the beginning of the year that we could play for the Stanley Cup, best two out of three series with home ice advantage in front of our fans, I would have taken that anytime to play for the big prize," said Canucks coach Alain Vigneault. "That's what we've got right now."

Jays settle for a split

Toronto hasn't won a series in Kansas City since 2003 season

Jeff Francoeur drove in two runs, helping Luke Hochevar win for the first time in seven starts, and the Kansas City Royals survived Joakim Soria's shaky ninth Thursday to beat the Toronto Blue Jays 3-2.

Soria, reclaiming the closer role he lost May 30 after back-to-back blown saves, loaded the bases in the ninth but got his eighth save in 13 opportunities.

Edwin Encarnacion and Rajai Davis hit one-out singles off the two-time all-star, then Mike McCoy, after being down 0-2, drew his fourth walk of the day to load the bases with two out. But Soria got Corey Patterson on an infield pop-up, giving the Royals their fifth win in 19 games.

Hochevar (4-6) allowed two runs in the fourth but nothing else in seven innings. The right-hander gave up six hits, walked three and struck out three. He did not give up a home run for the fourth straight start after allowing 13 in his first 10 outings.

Ricky Romero (5-6) pitched an eight-inning complete game for Toronto, allowing three runs on eight hits, with two walks and four strikeouts.

Alcides Escobar singled in the third and scored the first run on rookie Eric Hosmer's soft single into right.

Melky Cabrera then reached on a fielder's choice and Francoeur rifled a two-run single into right as the Royals completed a season-high 11-game homestand with a 4-7 record and kept the Blue Jays from winning the series.

In the Blue Jays' second, Jose Bautista reached on a fielder's choice, Adam Lind singled and J.P. Arencibia tripled into left field. Mitch Maier made a leap for the ball, but it hit the wall and bounced back toward centre field as Lind and Bautista scored.

Boyd returns to Argos lighter and faster

It was a scene that played itself out dozens of times last year.

Running back Cory Boyd lowering his shoulder and hurling himself at a linebacker in a thunderous collision. The play drew hoots of appreciation from Boyd's Toronto Argonauts teammates Thursday morning.

The approving chorus came partly because such hits have been rare in the first week of training camp — and not just because there tends to be a lot less hitting in practice.

Boyd, who rushed for 1,359 yards and left a lot of would-be tacklers in pain last season, has been a different kind of running back in camp. Where he might have run over an opponent in the past, he now finds ways to get around them.

"I felt as though I had to run over everybody and be that wrecking ball. I tried to live up to everybody else's expectations."

ARGONAUTS RUNNING BACK CORY BOYD ON HIS WEIGHT LAST YEAR

To that end, he dropped 20 pounds in the off-season to improve his speed.

"I felt last year I was out of shape and didn't do my team any good," Boyd said after practice Thursday. "I didn't really trust my speed, so I put on weight."

While the end result was good, Boyd suffered at least two concussions and left the East final with an injured pelvis.

"I had to change my game," he said.

Head coach Jim Barker says he's not worried that Boyd might have changed his approach too much.

"He gets through a hole a little quicker," Barker said. "He's not looking to trick somebody. He's looking to figure out how he can set that guy up.

"Obviously, once the games start his physical nature is going to come out. I know Cory and that's going to happen."

Barker plans to get Boyd more involved in the passing game this season and expects him to be better than he was last year when his fellow players named him the league's toughest player and best running back.

"We just expect him to expand his game," he said.

Boyd says he's fine with that because his only goal is to win a Grey Cup. He says the fact he lost the CFL rushing title by 37 yards to Winnipeg's Fred Reid after sitting out the season's final game doesn't bother him in the least.

"The only trophy I look forward to winning is the Grey Cup," he said. "My awards don't mean anything if my team doesn't win."

He says he has no doubts the Argos can win, mainly because the bulk of the team has had a year under Barker. "Last year, we were running around not knowing anything, learning a new playbook and new terminologies," he said. "It was just crazy. This year, it's a lot different."

Dallas overcomes James' triple-double to take 3-2 lead in NBA final ◗ Nowitzki had 29 points

Dirk Nowitzki and the Dallas Mavericks finally have the lead in this ultra-close NBA final, and now it really is "now or never" for LeBron James and the Miami Heat.

Nowitzki scored 29 points, driving for the go-ahead dunk with 2:45 remaining, and the Mavericks beat the Heat 112-103 on Thursday night to take a 3-2 lead in the NBA final.

Five years after going up 2-0 on the Heat, the Mavs finally got that elusive third victory, and can wrap up their first championship in Game 6 at Miami on Sunday night.

James, who called this game "now or never," responded from his worst playoff performance with 17 points, 10 rebounds and 10 assists, and Dwyane Wade battled through a sore left hip after a first-quarter collision to finish with 23 points.

MAVERICKS	HEAT
112	103

They get the final two games at home, but history is against them as they try to win a title in their first season together: In the 26 previous times finals that were tied 2-2, the Game 5 winner won 19 of them.

The Mavs shot 60 per cent through three quarters, briefly gave up the lead in the fourth, then controlled the final few minutes, just as they had in thrilling comebacks in Games 2 and 4.

This time, they got to play from ahead thanks to some sizzling shooting: 56.5 per cent from the field, including 13 of 19 (68 per cent) from three-point range.

Jason Terry scored 21 points and J.J. Barea had 17 for the Mavs, with Nowitzki briefly throwing both arms in the air as he walked off the court surrounded by a sea of blue fans who hope he'll bring home a championship trophy if they can pull out another victory in Miami.

DEVELOPMENT OF MEMORY IN CHILDREN
IS YOUR CHILD BETWEEN THE AGES OF 7 AND 16?

We invite you to participate in our study on Children's Memory Development. This study looks at thinking abilities affecting children's memory and how they relate to a child's age.
The study involves two 2-hour sessions and will take place in our lab at York University or another convenient location.
We will compensate you for your time and travel expenses, and children will receive a token of appreciation. Older children will also receive a certificate for volunteer hours. You will also receive a brief report of your child's performance on the tasks.

For further information or to volunteer for the study, contact Lila Elkhadem, M.A.,
